Atlantic Grill owner Paul Sachetti was in school at the University of Tampa when his frat brothers decided to open a restaurant in underground Atlanta. He moved to Atlanta after working for Dun & Bradstreet and started his first restaurant in underground Atlanta in 1970 call "The Bucket Shop."

It ran strong for ten years introducing the first 1/2 pound burger to Atlanta. Success came as they opened twelve restaurants between Atlanta, Columbus and Savanna. In 1982, he sold his interest and started the Blue Ribbon Grill in 1985 which he ran until 2008.

During this time, he formed an LLC and went back to his original success with a great burger restaurant. Hence, Atlantic Grill was born. Atlantic Grill started in 2006 bringing hanburgers, turkey burgers, patty melts and the best corn beef Ruben south of NY you'll ever try. Their hamburgers, turkey burgers and corn beef are made in house as well as their homemade potato chips. Atlantic Grill is a great place for lunch for dinner combining amazing burgers with a friendly atmosphere. The price of their menu items ranges from $6.95 - $13.95 giving everyone the bang for their buck. One of the greatest aspects of this grill is their friendly service. The owner and management bring a great sense of down to earth friendship the moment you walk in. It's a place there you'll always feel welcomed and accepted. Paul loves working in the restaurant because he finds it a fun atmosphere. His plan is to build a couple of more Atlantic Grills in the future.

Atlantic Grill's GM says the burger is the best menu choice.
