Atlantic Station's Café Nineteen is a local community café that started four years ago and is ran with a modern European edge. Café Nineteen is a café by day and has a lounge type atmosphere at night. Using Illy's coffee franchise to supply fresh Italian coffee, it is a great place to stop by for a breakfast snack along with a great coffee. Their morning menu consists of muffins, cookies croissants all baked daily in house. If your feeling for lunch, during lunch ours their menu consists of pizza's, chicken wings, salads, chips & dip, sandwiches, soups and of course many desserts. All bread is made fresh daily and used also at Atlantic Station's BoneHeads restaurant. With owner, Sean Lupton, having run four Atlanta Bread Company restaurants, you know your getting a quality lunch with fresh baked breads. Their specialty burger is a must try combining bacon, mushrooms, cheese and egg in a great burger. Their menu is updated three times per day in the café as well as on their website. Their international bar consists of wines from around the world and a diverse beer list consisting of sixteen different selections. Their barista, Dan Mueller, is an award winning Latté artist creating amazing art by skillfully pouring cream into select coffees.

Although the Latté art will be sure to catch your attention and exceeds your expectations, the main focus of the barista is to make your coffee experience at Café Nineteen the best coffee experience that you will ever remember. Creating the latté art alone requires a combination of steamed milk done perfectly as well as great shots of espresso. The steamed milk will grant a great pleasant taste with the amazing flavor and aroma of the espresso granting a delicious experience in every sip.

The owner wanted a café that would cater to its community and make a personal impact on all of its visitors. He accomplished this task by using a high-tech and high-feel approach offering customers the opportunity to interact with the café as well receiving the homely comfort and friendly treatment of the workers there. They have succeeded in creating a coffee shop where everyone knows your name. This is done by their POS system that tracks the orders of its regular customers. With this, customer's orders are tracked and customized special offers can be offered.
