Celebrating its 10th anniversary, the Atlanta Jewish Film Festival (AJFF) continues its tradition of great storytelling through cinematic masterpieces, presented Jan. 13-24, 2010. The festival showcases an international selection of films that explore life, culture and history with a Jewish twist.

As the largest film festival in Atlanta, movie-goers have the opportunity to view the featured films at three Atlanta-area locations: Regal Cinemas Atlantic Station Stadium 16, Lefont Sandy Springs Theater and Regal Cinemas Medlock Crossing Stadium 18.

The AJFF will announce its 2010 film lineup on Tuesday, Dec. 8, 2009, and festival tickets go on sale that day for $10 for general admission; $9 for seniors (65 and older); students with a valid ID are $9; and the matinee show is $8 (Monday-Thursday at 4 p.m.).

For more information, visit <http://www.ajff.org/> or call (404) 806-9913. The AJFF is a production of the American Jewish Committee, an international advocacy organization that works to build bridges of understanding between ethnic, religious and national groups.
